By Blaire Allison, The Love Guru

RENAISSANCE
CONCOURSE HOTEL
ATLANTA

Atlanta Airport, Atlanta, GA

You will be incredibly happy in love. You will have a love life filled with romance and passion. He will take you on exciting dates, give you sweet kisses and make passionate love to you. He will tell you you're the most beautiful woman he's ever seen and you will think he's the most handsome man you've ever laid eyes on. He will be your Prince Charming and he will treat you like a princess. Now, there's just one thing you have to do to make this come true. Act.

If you truly want this magical, passionate love in your life, you must take steps toward fulfilling this dream. I realize the prediction sounds generic. Were you hoping for something different? Did you want me to tell you that you were going to be depressed, sad and bored with your love life? Did you want me to give you false hopes or paint a mysterious picture that would encourage you to stall on taking matters into your own hands?

Most people want true love in their life, but don't take the appropriate action to make their dream happen. Specifically what I'm talking about is... they give away their power.

Are you giving away your power?

Every time you look to the stars to tell you what lies ahead for the future, you're giving power away. You give away power every time you visit a psychic to get a love life prediction. Every time you ask a friend for advice, "Should I continue dating him or break up?" "Should I go on a second date with him... even though the first one was nothing special?" Each time you ask someone else what to do in your life, you're giving away your power and becoming a victim to circumstances. And yes, I know it's fun to ask your girlfriends what you should do. For them to make your decisions for you is easy. Same goes for sitting down across from that psychic with the crystal ball or tarot cards. It gives us permission to sit back, relax, coast along — and do nothing. We're not forced to step out of our comfort zone. We're not told to take responsibility for our lives. We're just following what others are telling us to do. Which means we're not responsible for any of the results, since we're simply following orders.

But that's not how dreams come true. It's not how we become empowered and it's not the route to become happy, really happy in our love lives.

The power is in your hands.

On my radio show people call in with questions about their love lives. Since I'm intuitive they always want me to predict their future. They want to turn their problem over to me in hopes that I will wave my wand and give them the answers. And although I can understand the appeal of someone giving you the answers, I refuse. Why? Because the future is in their hands. They decide what's going to happen or what's not going to happen by the decisions they make.

The same goes for you. That's right, this puts you in the driver's seat and gives you responsibility. Maybe there's some pressure to "get things right" too, but this is also the gift of incredible freedom and empowerment.

No psychic is 100% accurate. Have you ever had that experience? How did you feel when a psychic predicted something for you and then it never happened the way they said it would?

Through the years I've gone to psychics, who all predicted that the man I was dating at that time (or the man I was lusting over at that time) would marry me. But year after year, and psychic after psychic, and man after man, I never ended up marrying any of those guys. Not one. And although I'm thankful for not making a long-term commitment to the wrong guy, I also went through periods of sadness and disappointment and feelings of betrayal that what the psychic had told me didn't happen. I used to wonder, "What did I do wrong to mess up my love life? How come the prediction didn't happen when I wanted it to so badly?" It became a never-ending cycle of, "What did I do wrong?"

But the truth of it was, I never did anything wrong. It wasn't meant to be and the psychics weren't predicting any future — instead, they were reading the possibilities that were present at the time.

Maybe there's some pressure to "get things right" too, but this is also the gift of incredible freedom and empowerment.

The future is in your hands.

The power for your life, and your love life, is in your hands. You decide what you want to happen in your life. How? First off, the future is not set in stone. There are no definites in life. Tomorrow is created by the decisions that you make today, in the present moment. The future is created by your thoughts and desires.

Let me give you an example: Say you would like to start the New Year in love. Your first step would be to commit to that goal. You want to be proud of your desire. The next step would be to act in alignment with that goal. Perhaps you go on a date and the man you are on a date with says he never wants to get married and he's not interested in anything serious. At that point you have a decision to make. Since you already decided that you want to be in love in 2010 and you made your commitment to that goal (Remember, that was Step 1) then you would honor that desire and act in alignment with it (Step 2). You would say "Thank you!" for the date and move on.

You would absolutely not continue dating that guy. You wouldn't continue talking to him on the phone or e-mailing him. You would totally cut him off. Why? Because he's a distraction. He doesn't want what you want in your love life right now, therefore making him wrong for you and a detour from your goal. The idea is to stay focused on your dream and keep making decisions that are in alignment with it. This is how you make your fabulous future come alive!

So this year, rather than running off to check the horoscope page or going to a psychic for predictions, make a New Year's resolution to take an active role in making things happen. You are not only the main character in this performance called life, you are also the director and producer who decides what happens in the play.

This minute, start taking responsibility for your life. Starting now, design your love life the way you want it. And most of all, enjoy the love journey — and the beautiful fairytale ending you're creating!

5 Key Things To Remember When Being Your Own Psychic

1. Remember the future is always changing. You create the future by the thoughts and actions you make in the present moment.
2. You are the creator of your love life. To create the love life you want, don't sit around passively waiting for things to happen, make them happen!
3. Decide what you want to happen in your love life.
4. Make a commitment to making it happen.
5. Make sure all your actions are in alignment to the commitment you made to yourself.
