

Do You Know My Husband?

The Unexpected Journey Of How
The Love Guru Found The One

The Love Guru

Special thanks to my editor, Aubry Carpenter. I looked high and low for an editor that not only had incredible editing skills, but for whom I was compatible with personality and work-wise. Thank you making my book better, and thank you for being so dedicated to the process. I appreciate you!

While all the stories in this book are true, some names and identifying details have been changed to protect the privacy of the people involved.

Do You Know My Husband?
Copyright © 2014 by Blaire Allison, LLC.
ISBN-13: 978-1981248032
ISBN-10: 198124803X
1st edition: 2014
2nd edition: 2017

No part of this publication may be reproduced, stored in or introduced into a retrieval system, or transmitted, in any form or by any means (electronic, mechanical, photocopying, recording or otherwise), without the prior written permission of the copyright owner, except by a reviewer who may quote brief passages in a review.

This book is sold subject to the condition that it shall not, by way of trade or otherwise, be lent, re-sold, hired out or otherwise circulated without the author's prior consent in any form of binding or cover other than that in which it is published and without a similar condition including this condition being imposed on the subsequent purchaser.

Do You Know My Husband® and The Spiritual Way To Attract The One® are registered trademarks of Blaire Allison, LLC and/or its affiliates in the United States or other countries, and may not be used without written permission. All other trademarks are the property of their respective owners.

I dedicate this book to myself.
To your curious nature and dedication to success.
I love you and I will always be there for you.

I also dedicate this book to Spirit, God, The Universe.
To my angels, guides, ascended masters, archangels, fairies, star family, animal totems, and ancestors. Thank you for always guiding my way. Thank you for your love, loyalty, and support. I do this for you. I love you more than words can say. Thank you for always being by my side. I am forever grateful.

Congratulations on starting (or going deeper into) your spiritual growth and healing journey!

Welcome to The Love Guru's Book Series

The Love Guru's books are created to raise your consciousness and expand your mind. Once you read them, you'll never look at love, relationships, or life the same again. Instead, you'll start to see life from a more enlightened perspective.

Two Books in One!

On one level, The Love Guru's books are created as a light and fun read that you can easily pick up while you are sitting on the beach or waiting for a plane. But on a deeper level, her books are to be used as self-improvement tools. Within these pages are deep insights, lessons, and realizations that you can apply to better your life and greatly improve your success in the world.

BOOKS IN THE SERIES

The Fairytale Series

Do You Know My Husband?

Is This What Happily Ever After Is?!

Warrior Training

(An Online Adventure)

I'm Not Being Nice Anymore

The Alien Series

The First Installment: The Reconnection

This is not your average book.

The Love Guru's "Heart Healing" Books

Open Your Heart and Heal Your Soul

The Love Guru's books document her spiritual journey over a 13+ year time period. It's suggested that you read the first book in the series and then follow it by reading the next one, and then the next one, rather than jumping around (although it may be tempting)!

This way, you will go through the shifts in consciousness as Blaire goes through them, and you will experience transformation in your life too. This happens all by the simple act of reading the books and thinking about what is shared.

Her books are "heart healing" books, meaning that they are encoded with energy and wisdom that awakens, heals, and helps you shift and change. Some of the information and insights shared may bring up uncomfortable feelings, such as anger, sadness, frustration, and confusion within you. This is good, as this means the dark parts of you are being stirred up and brought to the light, so they can be looked at, healed, and released. It's suggested that when you have a strong or uncomfortable feeling towards something that Blaire does or shares during her journey that you journal about your thoughts and feelings, and see what messages they have for you. In other words, see what you can learn.

Enjoy reading the books, expanding your consciousness, and going on your own adventure. We're glad you're here.

This is BOOK ONE in The Love Guru's Series

A MESSAGE TO THE READER:

The book you are about to read is based on blog posts I wrote when I was 26-29 years old. Since then I have matured and gained much wisdom. Although there is a possibility that you may judge me (or I may judge myself) based on my lols, hehes, hahas, hey girlies, sweeties, winks and other silly posts throughout the book, I decided to leave the original text intact in order to honor who I was and the journey I took.

We do not start off as beings filled with great wisdom and high consciousness. Everyone's journey is filled with lessons that make them who they are. Our perspectives that were once valid and held close to our hearts become memories of distant past.

Thank you for reading my journey.
May it inspire you to go on your own adventure.

Wishing you the best in love,
The Love Guru

PS - You are going to read about the website, www.marryblaire.com and the email address related. Please note, I no longer own this website. So if you want to get in touch with me, please visit my current website, www.loveguru.net.

CONTENTS:

The Journey Begins	1
A New Interest Takes Hold	3
Rules of Dating	9
Meditation and Manifestation	11
If You Build It, Your Husband Will Come	17
The Fun Begins	33
Telling Men I Want to Get Married	37
The Dating Begins	41
Two Week Anniversary of My Website	51
Happy 27th Birthday, Still No Husband	59
Awkward First Dates	65
Two Months into the Search	75
The Thirty-Minute First Date	79
The Universe Steps In	83
Dating "Airport Guy"	87
Releasing Control to the Universe	93
Helping Others Find Love	97
Dating Dilemma	103
Honoring My Desire to Get Married	105
Goodbye "Airport Guy," Hello Teacher	109
Dating Differently, Being More Adventurous	111
Our 1 Month Anniversary	115
Adjusting To Being in a Relationship	121

Taking “Me” Time	125
Ending My Relationship with “The Teacher”	131
Moving Forward, Wiser	135
My Deadline Is Near, But Who Cares?	143
Getting Clearer on What I Want	149
No More Waiting For A Man	159
New Perspectives on Love	167
Becoming The Love Guru	175
The Spiritual Way To Attract The One®	185
More Solid in Myself; Expanded Consciousness	197
Making a Dream Come True	205
Meeting “Mr. Positive”	209
Dating “Mr. Positive”	217
“Single Blaire” Becomes “Relationship Blaire”	233
Learning My Lessons; Expansion	243
Falling In Love	247
My Man, “Sweet Kisses”	265
Becoming Softer; Opening My Heart	273
Breaking Old Dating and Relationship Paradigms	291
No More Hiding Who I Am	305
Moving On	309
Is That Really How the Story Ends?	311

The Journey Begins

Ever since I was young, I wondered, how do you find The One? I know it's not a traditional question for a young child to think about, but it's a thought that would frequently cross my mind. I knew there had to be a secret formula of sorts that if you followed, you'd have success. So to find my answer, I started asking questions. Lots of them. I asked friends, family, and even strangers, "How do you find The One?" Unfortunately, the answers I got never seemed to make any sense. People said things like, "When the time is right, he'll just appear." I also heard, "Date a lot of men and you'll find him. It's a numbers game." Everyone told me something different. There was no rhyme or reason, and I knew there had to be more to the story.

How could it be that I was told to actively pursue my career goals by doing specific steps, but when it came to my love life, all I was supposed to do was sit around and wait? Or on the other end of things, simply date a lot? How could any of this be true?

Growing up, I was told to get good grades in order to get into a good college. When I was in college, I was told to volunteer for special activities so I would stand out to potential employers. There were lots of tips to follow to ensure career success. I was to dress in a certain way, talk in a certain way, and behave in a certain way. There were loads of books on the topic, and everyone seemed to have a very clear understanding of how to do this. But with love, and more specifically, finding The One, there was no formula to follow. I knew this couldn't be true.

In college, I studied human communications and psychology, but those courses didn't provide any insight for me on finding The One, so I did an independent project in my spare time. I created a detailed survey, printed off copies, and headed to the graduate building to find people to interview. I figured that graduate students were older than I and most likely wiser, so I hoped they could provide some insight. Sadly, I was wrong. They were as clueless as I was.

My life continued down this path of searching and being dissatisfied. I landed a job working in TV, a dating show at that. Every day, I interviewed couples and singles about their relationships, but still no answers came to me. After that, I ran my own event-planning company that hosted singles' and couples' events. I produced sexuality events and bachelorette parties. And then a well-known dating site hired me. Clearly, I was good at my job, and I was definitely in the love industry, but still the secret formula for finding The One eluded me.

My love life was nothing special. Looking for love started to feel like a second job. Finish with work, sign onto a dating site, and look through profiles in search of love.

Online dating took a lot of time and effort. Reading through profiles, sending emails, setting up times to chat, and then finally the first dates. Most men didn't look like their profile pictures, and this annoyed me. They would make it through the screening process I put before them, but when we met, it would be a total waste of time. They were boring, nerdy, fat, balding, or old. There was always something wrong. Plus, many times there was simply no chemistry. I would leave my blind dates disappointed and slightly depressed.

By the age of 26, I had lost interest in socializing. I was no longer in the mood to go clubbing or out for a drink, and my friends were dropping like flies. Most were getting married and having children. All of a sudden, I was the lone ranger. There were not many men I was interested in. I was sick of the dating scene and hated going on dates. I thought about giving up forever, but I was too young to be bitter. Besides, I still wanted my fairy-tale ending.

Rules of Dating

The way my Jewish Orthodox friend Lauren spoke about dating was very different from what I was used to. I thought it was extreme, strange, and unrealistic in this day and age, yet I was fascinated by the concepts she spoke of.

I couldn't imagine telling a guy on the first date that I wanted to get married, and I definitely wouldn't tell him how many kids I wanted to have. Maybe after dating him exclusively and for some time, but not when I'm getting to know him and on the first date! Doesn't Lauren feel weird about doing that? Isn't she afraid of scaring away men?

All these years, through trial and error, my friends and I had learned the "hot" topics to avoid on dates. That would be anything having to do with pressuring the guy into making a commitment. It was understood that you didn't ask for anything more in the relationship than what he was already giving. You didn't talk about how you were feeling about him or about the relationship. You didn't bring up any serious talks about him or about the two of you as a couple. You didn't assume you were a couple unless he mentioned it first. And you definitely didn't bring up anything having to do with the topic of marriage, or even mention the "m" word, unless of course he brought it up first, and in that case, even if he did, you would act nonchalantly about the whole topic like it was something you had never even thought about. Which, in the case that he did bring up the topic of marriage, then this was a really good sign, and all I could say was, "You go girl!"

In my world, every girl knew that if she brought up any of the subjects I just mentioned, she would have just committed a cardinal error and would have surely ruined any chances she had with the guy. No girl would take pity on you, for we all knew by

DO YOU KNOW MY HUSBAND?

When you scrolled down the page there was a glamour headshot taken from years ago when I had a photo shoot with a professional photographer.

Above the picture it said, "This is Me - Blaire Allison"

And below, "My goal is to be engaged by December 2004."

I randomly chose the date December 31st as it was about six months from the current date, and I thought it sounded good. Might as well be engaged for the New Year, right?! I thought so. I also wanted to have a set date so my family would take me seriously. I could see my parents looking at the site, laughing at its cuteness, then going back to their business. I was always coming up with quirky and creative ideas, and I didn't want them to group this into the same category. They needed to understand the responsibility I was giving them. I was handing the burden of finding me a man on to them! Guess what parents? You want your daughter married? Then, you go find her a husband!

THE LOVE GURU

I also put a countdown clock on the site. I thought this was good for dramatic effect. I found some HTML code online and thought it would be funny if everyone watched the clock counting down to my engagement.

I also knew that if I put a countdown and had a specific date to be engaged that my friends and family would know I meant business. Yes, Blaire is really ready to get married!

Then I wrote the introduction to my website...

Hello and welcome to my site! My name is Blaire, and with my 27th birthday just a few weeks away, I've decided to go about looking for my life partner a bit differently, a bit larger, and a bit more dramatically!

As I get older I feel my social circle has been getting smaller and smaller, and the prospects for my potential mate are not as great or abundant as in the past. I've been to singles events, done the club scene, and have been matched up and internet searched. Now, it's time for me to mass market! I don't want my search to be limited, nor do I want to wait forever - this is why I'm reaching out to you!

Over the years I've worked as a matchmaker for Warner Bros television as well as produced singles events for Match.com. I am around singles everyday. I plan and host events and meet many men, but sad to say, no one has captured my heart. I help singles improve their self-esteem and love life (I'm a Dating Coach, www.loveguru.net). I also plan events for couples. I know relationships.

Furthermore, I run my own event planning company specializing in bachelorette parties. Every weekend, I plan amazing evenings for lucky ladies who are getting married. Let's just say I'm around love all the time, and I've decided it's my turn to get a dose of it!

THE LOVE GURU

There was a “Pictures” page.

This is how I’ll look when I meet my husband.

This is how I’ll look when kissing my husband.

DO YOU KNOW MY HUSBAND?

This is how I'll look when my husband asks me to marry him.

Later I added a poll to the website where people were able to vote on questions having to do with my search for The One. My first poll question for visitors was, "Do You Think I Will Be Engaged by December 2004?"

But, let me not get ahead of myself. Let's step away from the logistics and design of my website and get back to the story...

So, my site was finished and ready to be shown to my first victims, I mean parents. I jokingly call them my first victims, as the idea was that as soon as someone looked at my site, they'd unknowingly be roped into the burden of finding me a husband. Come here, look at my site. Ah, ha! I got you! Now, go find my husband!

I figured I'd start off by showing my site to people in my life slowly. Let my parents be the first ones to look at it, let me see their reaction, and then I'd tweak whatever I needed to. In order for my master plan to be a success, I needed to make sure I received the right reaction and inspired the necessary action. This was a two-part plan: have them look at the site and get the message, then send them out to work, looking for my husband.

Telling Men I Want to Get Married

Tuesday, June 22, 2004

I have a date with this guy from the Jewish dating website, Jdate.com, on Thursday. It's a date I was in the process of setting up before this website took off and before you all started watching me date, so this guy is not aware of my search for a husband and my side project, this website. Let me tell you about him. He's from New Jersey (just like me) which I like. New Jersey people are all the same and I like that. His picture on Jdate looks cute, so hopefully that will be true in person as well. You never know about internet pictures and then how they'll look in real life. For some reason many guys put up pictures from years ago that aren't the least bit accurate and then you meet them in person and they look older and fatter and balder. I'm not really sure why anyone would do that, but go figure. Anyway this guy is fun to talk to on the phone as well.

Today we were talking on the phone and I told him about my new project— this website. After all, I thought it was only fair that I share how I'm looking for a husband and how there's a website sharing my quest to find him. Since the website is getting passed around like wildfire, I didn't want him to just stumble upon it and feel weird about it, or about me. Best to start the relationship off being totally honest with what is going on. There's no hiding this website, it's taken on a life of its own and it's out there.

In bringing up the topic, I was a little bit nervous about how he'd react. Again, we didn't even have our first date yet and I didn't even know if I liked him or not, so maybe it wasn't a great move on my behalf, but I thought it was only fair to him. I felt I should be honest with my intentions. He laughed when I told him and said he would check out the website and get back to me with his thoughts,

About The Author

There are many Masters at this time walking the planet. The Love Guru is one of those Masters.

In 2013, Blaire became Enlightened when she healed her childhood wounds and unhealthy relationship patterns.

Blaire is a Spiritual Teacher, Intuitive Heart Healer, Psychic Medium, Relationship Expert and Marriage and Family Therapist.

She is able to open and heal your heart so you can attract the love, have the relationship and the life you desire. She's also able to clear and heal any anger, sadness, loneliness, frustration, anxiety, resentment and fear that is blocking you, as well as guide you in releasing old thought patterns, sabotaging behaviors, unhealthy relationship patterns, karma, childhood wounds and dysfunctional patterns that have been passed down from one generation to the next.

Blaire has been featured in The New York Times, The Los Angeles Times, CNN, MSNBC, Montel, Glamour Magazine, Wendy Williams, The Guardian UK, and many more.

More information can be found at www.loveguru.net